Mokena Man With Draws $35,000 Suit

A suit for $35,000 brought by Thos. Moore, Mokena, against the Chateau Cantigny Veterans association—legal owner of the post home of Cantigny post VFW, was dismissed last Friday morning by Circuit Judge James V. Bartley, at the plaintiff's request.

No explanation for the dismissal was given in court, although it was understood an offer of a small settlement had been made.

Moore brought the suit for damages for alleged injuries suffered during a party at the post home April 9, 1940. He asserted several men who had become intoxicated had assaulted him there.

Attorney A. H. Krusemark brought the action, and the post was defended by Attorneys Burke and Schenk.

Voice of the People

It's Coming To Something

When the townspeople of New Lenox find it necessary to repair their own streets, while the new and modern grader sits all summer basking in the sun, deteriorating for lack of use, and bought incidentally, with these taxpayers money for this purpose.

It was startling to this town's Road Commissioner, to witness some of these determined men, with the aid of their womenfolk, making a desperate effort with pick and shovel to get a very bad and hazardous hill on Vine street into some sort of safe shape before the heavy fall rains arrive. This, not only to prevent further accidents but to protect their cars from the severe beating which they are taking because of this condition. Are other adjacent towns faced with this same problem? Surely, the citizens have a right to expect this work to be taken care of and at least a periodical going over by the grader, without any argument, threat or demand.

St. John's Evan. Congregation To Observe 79th Anniversary October 5th

The congregation of the St. John's Evangelical church in Mokena is making preparations for the celebration of the 79th anniversary of the congregation.

The history of the congregation does not differ in its general characteristics from the beginning and growth of other congregations. It was in the early days of 1842 when the first German speaking families came here from Europe to settle down as small farmers and farm hands.

Quite a number of years before the organization of St. John's, missionary work had been done here by the Rev. C. Haas, Kolb and Gradmann.

January 1, 1862, Rev. Wm. Meyer took charge of the mission work. Arrangements were made to meet all Evangelical Christians of the community on a certain day. On March 1, 1862 a meeting was held at the school house in Mokena and after the services the organization of the German United Evangelical St. John's Church was perfected.

A few weeks later the first steps were taken toward erecting a church building. The lots on the southeast corner of the Mokena park were chosen and soon the frame church was completed and the young congregation and its pastor were glad and thankful to possess their own church home. It was dedicated on Sept. 20th, 1862.

Special anniversary services will be held Sunday, Oct. 5th. More details regarding services next week.

The last car was pretty well bashed up in front and the driver badly cut about the face and lips and the car had to be towed to Mokena. Rising Barometer of Public Opinion Aids F.D.R. Battle Against Powerful Enemies

Roosevelt Refuses 'Catspaw' Role in 1933 Political Drama When Opposition Demands 'Rescue Party' Return Government Helm to Them.

By special arrangement with Collier's Weekly and Western Newspaper Union this newspaper presents in condensed form a series of articles by President Roosevelt currently appearing in that magazine. The articles are taken from the President's newly written introductions to forthcoming volumes of his state papers. This, the third article, contains the President's own story of the bitter battle to maintain and extend the gains of liberalism.

The Continuing Struggle for Liberalism

IT HAS frequently been said that eternal vigilance is necessary to preserve our liberties. It is equally true that eternal vigilance is necessary to keep democracies and their governments truly liberal. We in the United States have had first-hand experience with that truism since the end of 1933, when, for the first time, the full effects of our program of recovery and reform began to be felt. For, as soon as the clear action of the new administration in 1933 had started the wheels of industry turning, there came the demand from some sources to stop all of the reforms, and to let things begin again to run on as they had during the previous decade.

Of course, the people of the United States have always understood that the new administration never intended to be a mere rescue party—organized to save the economic system and turn it over to the small, powerful group which had formerly controlled it through their concentrated economic power. The government in 1933 was determined not only to save the system, but also to remove from it the abuses, evils, and widespread maladjustments which had brought it to the very brink of destruction. The government was determined that the system, thus preserved and reformed, should no longer be subject to the control of the handful of men and corporations that had dominated it in the false boom days before 1929.

To carry out that determination was to resist, from 1933 down to date, all the efforts of mighty forces—day by day, year by year. These forces had tremendous interests at stake—wealth, privilege, economic power, political power. Although few in number, they had the resources which enabled them to make the most noise, and to become the most vociferous in the press, over the radio, through newspaper and outdoor advertising, by floods of telegrams and letters to the congress, by employment of professional lobbyists—by all the many means of propaganda and public pressure which have been developed in recent years.

Opposition Strengthens Efforts.

In 1938 the efforts of this minority, consistent in its opposition since 1933, rose to new heights. They had tried stubbornly at the polls in 1936 to stop our program of reform. They had failed. They had tried in 1937 to stop it in the courts, where they had been so successful during 1935 and 1936. Here, too, they had failed. Therefore, through the years of 1937 and 1938, their activities to impede progress and to bring about a repeal or emasculate of the New Deal measures of reform were redoubled.

There were several reasons for this particular burst of effort this year. First, the Supreme court fight, although it had been finally successful in obtaining its objective, had been defeated in the congress. The enemies of liberal government tried to hail that loss of a single battle as a defeat of the entire progressive program of the administration. A strong "putsch" was organized to try to make it appear as though the representatives of the people in the congress had, by failing to pass the Supreme court bill, repudiated the principles and conduct of the New Deal.

Second, there had come a substantial business recession—commencing in the fall of 1937, and continuing through the first half of 1938. These same minority groups sought at once to take advantage of it by blaming it exclusively on the attitude and legislation of the government, claiming that the administra-

Needing a preponderance of power to maintain liberalism in the front ranks of his own party councils and in the executive and legislative branches of the government itself, President Roosevelt took an active part in some of the primary elections of 1938. When cries of "purge" arose from administration critics, the Chief Executive, resenting the applied term, pointed out that his participation and expressed opinions of candidates, prevented the deliberate mis-use of his name by those falsely claiming his support. Above are four men whose opponents received the presidential support. Back row, left to right: Sen. Walter F. George, Georgia, and Sen. Millard T. Tydings, Maryland; bottom, left to right, Sen. Ellison D. Smith and Sen. Guy M. Gillette.

tion was "strangling business" and "ruining confidence," and preventing "full recovery."

In 1932 the national income had fallen as low as $38,000,000,000 from a high in 1928 of over $80,000,000,000. Since 1932 and for each and every year thereafter, up to and including 1937, the national income had gradually risen until it reached the figure of $68,000,000,000.

Production Overtakes Sales.

This consistent and continuous recovery was stopped short in 1937 by several factors. First, the production and speculative buying of heavy and consumer goods had been increased by industry at such a rapid pace that it had completely outstripped the ability of the people of the country to buy such goods. The same thing happened in 1937 on a small scale, that had happened in 1929 on a prodigious scale, namely, the purchasing power of the consumers of goods had been exceeded too quickly and too greatly by the amount of merchandise manufactured. The result was that large inventories of stocks had accumulated, which could not be sold.

In addition, the prices of merchandise had been forced up by business too drastically during the year 1937, in spite of all the efforts of the government to discourage such inordinate increases. The mounting prices, in turn, contributed also to the inability to sell the goods manufactured, and helped to create a large excess of goods which could not be sold.

At the same time, with the steady rise of business through 1936 and early 1937, the government had begun to cut down its own expenditures for relief and work relief. It did so with the reasonable expectation that private industry, with its increased markets and output, would take up some of the slack, and provide some of the employment which had previously been furnished by the government through public works projects. In this the government miscalculated.

Liberalism Endangered.

All of the big guns and resources of pressure politics and modern propaganda were brought into play in late 1937 and 1938, to try to strike down liberalism in the congress and in the executive branch of the government.

NOTABLE EVENT

A series of articles by the President of the United States is a notable event in journalism. Seldom has any newspaper had an opportunity to publish anything under the name of any President. The present series of articles is a notable contribution both to history and journalism. This newspaper publishes the articles without bias as to the opinions contained in them.

The 'Round Table' Discusses Rural Social Problems

WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.—A call to rural churches and women's clubs to assume responsibility for community conditions and the improvement of intergroup relations, was voiced in a Round Table report on the small community presented to the Williamstown Institute of Human Relations, held here biennially under the auspices of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

In discussing the "critical" social problems of rural communities, the Round Table, which met daily throughout the five-day Institute, under the chairmanship of Dr. Benson Y. Landis of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, stressed the opinion that one of the chief problems is that of the small community "whose leaders think it has no problems."

The Round Table report stressed the importance of the rural family who do much to preserve and protect the family, as a unit.

The policy of the federal government, however, continued to follow the only path of true recovery and the only assurance of preservation of our system of private profit and free enterprise—the continuance and strengthening of social reform and progressive legislation.

When I called the congress into extraordinary session in 1937, I pointed this out; and I announced the determination of the federal government to proceed with its program on all fronts with full speed.

Accordingly, I recommended the enactment of new farm legislation. I called for a comprehensive farm program—not only to replace the old measures which had been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme court, but one which could go forward. I called for legislation for soil conservation and for regulation of crop production so as to furnish an ever-normal granary, which would give the farmer a fair share of the national income, and at the same time, would also assure the consumer a steady supply of food and textile fiber at reasonable prices.

I also recommended to this extraordinary session of the congress the enactment of legislation providing for minimum wages and maximum hours and the abolition of child labor in all interstate occupations. Only in this way could sweatshop conditions be eliminated and workers receive a reasonable purchasing power—to enable them to live with some degree of decency, and to provide a market for the products of the farms and factories of the nation.

Much of the legislation which I recommended was passed during 1938. For example, a new farm program was adopted; legislation establishing minimum wages and maximum hours and outlawing child labor was finally passed; various tax reforms were adopted; additional funds were provided for the construction of public works to furnish employment; and a congressional and administrative committee was set up to study economic power.

Many of the great measures debated in 1937 and 1938—farm legislation, reorganization of government, minimum wages and maximum hours, increased public works, monopoly controls, judicial reforms, water power development, low-cost housing—have, by now, become more or less accepted as part of our economic life. It is a little difficult, therefore, to look back even across the short period to 1938 and remember how bitter and how difficult was the struggle—in the congress and out of the congress—which was necessary in order to have some of these laws adopted. The opposition to them—chiefly from the same sources which had opposed the whole program of reform since 1933 was of "blitzkrieg" proportions.

In that struggle, a few Democratic members of the house and senate—who had been elected in 1936 and in earlier years on liberal platforms, and who had pledged themselves to support the great objectives and social measures enunciated in those platforms—had allied themselves with the opponents of the program.

It became quite obvious that this kind of conduct was not only a renunciation of platform pledges, but was actually endangering the success of the federal government's determination to preserve a liberal, progressive administration.

Germany Today Seems Deceived About U. S. Action as It Was in First World War... Mexican, S. American Plotting... Underestimate Aid to Britain... New SPAB Puts Success of Defense Work on Donald Nelson. (Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—Adolf Hitler apparently is being deceived about what the United States will do and what it can do in this war, in almost precisely the same way as the German High Command was deceived about the same things in the winter of 1916-17.

There are two main lines of deception then. There seem to be two now.

Count Johann von Bernstorff, who was Kaiser Wilhelm's ambassador to Washington during our period of neutrality, said to many newspaper men, including this writer, that he was not worried about the United States for two reasons. 1—The American people were not in favor of going to war with Germany—they had demonstrated it in many ways, including the re-election of Woodrow Wilson the preceding November on the "kept us out of war" issue. No. 2—If this country did become involved in the war, it would be in such a panic to arm itself that the supplies then keeping the Allies going would be cut off, or at least badly curtailed.

There was a point No. 3 as it developed, but this Von Bernstorff did not mention to newspaper men. But Germany had a scheme for keeping the United States very much occupied—with Mexico—if hostilities developed.

The comparison at present is flabbergasting, except that the order is slightly reversed.

German activities have not succeeded very well—so far at least—in Latin America. Quite the contrary. Two of the 20 Latin American republics which have always liked the United States the least—Argentina and Mexico—have been cracking down on the Nazis.

But this time the obvious plan of Berlin was to have the United States so involved with Japan that our efforts to supply Britain would lag. There are many evidences that Nippon has read the handwriting on the wall, and does not like to sacrifice its paws for Berlin's chestnuts.

Be that as it may, experts here do not believe that even war with Japan would appreciably affect our aid to Britain.

But, reverting to points one and two, the German High Command probably has been given a very accurate picture of American difficulties, particularly the opposition of such a large fraction of our public to a shooting war. However, it would not be at all surprising if Berlin has been deceived as to what this really means, just as it was 24 years ago.

The Greer episode OUGHT to wake up American opinion to the fact that this country WILL be in the war if it goes on long enough, and it becomes apparent that our participation is necessary to defeat Hitler. It ought also to convince the German High Command of the same thing.

One-Man Control May Be Given Donald Nelson

Most of the men in this country who have proved managerial ability agree with Bernard M. Baruch's criticism of SPAB, the new all-out national defense board which has absorbed OPM and OPACS, that it is a "faltering step forward" and that what is really needed is one-man control in the hands of the right person, with real power to act delegated to him by the President.

It is contended by many observers that there cannot be another shakeup. Those who hold this view insist that the fact that Vice President Henry A. Wallace heads this one means that it must be permanent, that while changes in the personnel UNDER Wallace can be made, the President would not allow Wallace to be discredited.

There is a good deal of what might be called half-logic in this. For instance how many people in the country realize that William S. Knudsen was regarded as rather a flop in OPM? How many realize that the really important development in SPAB's creation was not the new seven-man board, but the fact that Don Nelson is now executive director, holding the job, regardless of title.

The truth is the President was anxious to save Knudsen's face.

Where the observers seem to the writer to be wrong is that no matter what happens to SPAB it would appear possible to shuffle again.

Nelson will be given a run, so to speak. He will be handicapped by his seven-man board, it is true, but not so much as some observers think. Baruch sensed this at once, and the day after he made his devastating remark about a "faltering step forward" he added that "Nelson may be the man."

Practical Novelties For You to Cut Out

MISCELLANEOUS cutout designs are here to tempt hammer and saw into use. At top, left, is a very practical item—the "Leave a Note" bungalow. Inch wood makes this, and it is to be placed beside the front door. Pad and pencil inside the hinged door invites friends to leave word if they call when you are away. Practical, too, are the doorknockers—the red-headed woodpecker and the horse. And kitchen or dining room will welcome this clever cottage flower holder and the matching shade pulls.

Jig, coping or keyhole saw may be used in cutting these articles from wood—bright enamels for painting them. Pattern 29310, 15 cents, gives outlines and complete directions. Send your order to:

THE STORY SO FAR: Bound for the Chibougamau gold country, six men lost their lives on the Nottaway river. Red Malone, Garrett Finlay, brother of one of the six, and Blaise, half-breed guide, arrive at Nottaway posing as surveyors.

Malone flashed his pocket torch on the face of his friend, swollen beyond recognition. "By the father of all the moose, Blaise, look at him!"

"By gar, boss, w're you get dem bite?"

"You mean to say you two didn't hear the .45 a few hours back?" demanded Garry.

"Not a shot! I saw through the glasses that you and Lise were sitting pretty cozy on the beach and everything looked all right, so Blaise and I took a paddle up the lake. We came back around five, couldn't find you, so turned Flame loose. Then we lost him."

"Yes," laughed Garry, "everything was all right except that Tete-Blanche and his mob jumped me after she left. But I got three or four before they cracked me from behind with a club. I came to, lashed to a tree in a small bog back in the bush. Flame, bless 'im! took their trail and found me. Then chewed the thongs on my wrists."

"I told you, Garry!" burst out Red, flourishing his long arms in his anger. "Blaise and I warned you! The little, doublecrossing—"

"Wait till you hear the story, Red. It's a queer one!"

As they paddled back to camp, Finlay told the story in detail. "Well, what do you think, Constable Malone?"

"It looks like wolf eat wolf, now, Sergeant Finlay. If we don't get this Tete-Blanche, he's bound to get us! After today it'll be no quarter."

"Well, what's your idea, Blaise?" asked Finlay.

"We get dat white-head, quick, or we navare leave de lake. Dey goin' to hunt us like starve wolf. Some night we go straight to Isadore's place, I put a knife into Tete-Blanche in hees bed and we take Isadore to de railroad."

"Steady! Not so bloodthirsty!" objected Finlay, splashing water on his tortured face and chest. "We happen to be police, you know. My orders are to investigate the disappearance of six men."

"Until we can show that Isadore has a vital reason for keeping white men out of this country we've got no motive for his having them shot."

"I thought, of course, it was placer gold, somewhere on the river, Isadore was covering," said Red, "but Wabistan's never seen them working the bars."

"That's just it. We can't show a plausible motive for murdering these men. Until we find one we're licked. We haven't scratched the surface of this case yet, Red."

"You're right, chief. And if he succeeds in turning the Montagnais against us, we'll never get out of this country."

"They'll swarm on us. If we have to disclose the fact that we're police, Isadore will blame the Indians, stand pat and we're licked."

"Exactly, and he'll bring charges against me for firing on his men without cause."

Red snorted in disgust. "Why, you had to fight 'em, Garry! You knew they'd wipe you out if they took you and there'd be no proof of what happened. Of course, it's regulations but, after what we know and what they tried to do to you, what are you going to call it when Blaise and I meet up with this Tete-Blanche?"

"Self-defense, Red!" Garry chuckled.

"Thanks, Sergeant Finlay! Do you know this is the toughest assignment you and I ever had? You asked for it and got it because you're a trained surveyor before you joined the force."

CHAPTER XI

The returning Peterboro was met at the camp by Wabistan and his two sons. Beneath his thatch of grizzled hair and seamed forehead the old man's eyes were beady with excitement. "Ver' bad time at head of lake!" he announced. "Kinebik geeve de Montagnais whiskey an' tell dem white man make de chil' sick, an' more will die if de 'Evil Eye on Three Leg' stay on Waswanipi." The startled Indian peered into Garry's caricature of a face as he took his hands. "How you come dis way?" he demanded.

Finlay attempted a twisted smile. "Your friend, Tete-Blanche, tied me up and left me to the bugs."

The muscles in Blaise Brassard's jaw bulged. "When we leave Waswanipi," he rasped in Cree, "we leave Tete-Blanche in the ground and take Isadore with us! He has broken the law and given the Montagnais whiskey!"

"Take Isadore with you? Are you police sent by the Fathers at Ottawa?" excitedly demanded the old man.

Blaise shook his head. "No, but we are sent by the Fathers to make a picture of the lakes." He repeated his talk with Wabistan to his friends.

"He's right, Blaise," said Garry. "They've shown their hands. After today they've got to get rid of us to save their skins. And they'll use Kinebik and his evil eye nambajumbo to do it."

Finlay receives an anonymous letter suggesting that the six men were not drowned as reported. Suspicion prevails that Isadore, rich fur man, has made a gold strike and aims to keep prospectors out of the country at any cost. The three

"Well, what's our next move, chief?" demanded Red, fidgeting like a bear on a chain. "After what they tried today I'm not sleeping sound until I get my hooks on this white head."

"Don't underestimate that bird, Red," warned Garry as he sat stripped to the waist by the fire, rubbing his tormented body with the soda solution. "He's quick as an otter. I was sure I had him today. He wasn't ten yards away and coming in, head on, when I threw the gun on him! I never made a worse miss."

"You don't make many, Garry. Now what are the orders?"

"I'm going to Matagami to have a report for headquarters relayed by canoe to the railroad. It's my alibi and last will and testament," said the blinded man, nursing his puffed face. "With these wild Montagnais crazy with Isadore's whiskey and fed up with the idea that we've sickened their children, we've got the chance a rabbit has with a snowy owl."

Malone stopped his pacing, bent and peered anxiously into the fire-lit face of his friend. Then he faltered: "You're—you're not sending—for help?"

An effigy of a smile touched Finlay's distorted features.

"Do you think I am, Red?"

"Not the Sergeant Garrett Finlay I wintered on the Liard River with—not the man I saw bluff those miners at Fort McLeod!"

"No, we'll play this through, the four of us, as we started," said Finlay.

"Don't underestimate that bird, Red."

lay. "I'm going to report that we've found the bodies of two men who had been shot, not drowned, and were, ourselves, fired on, on the Nottaway; that I was ambushed and, finally, that we're going to stick until the arrival in August of a mysterious plane from the Bay when, if we live that long, there'll be a showdown. Because of the gravity of this Indian situation, I am advising the dispatch of a police plane in September to view our graves and clean up the case. This looks to me like the Waterloo of Sergeant Finlay and Constable Malone."

A look of incredulity lay on Malone's freckled face. He squinted curiously at his chief: "You're not talking like your old self, Garry. You've taken a tough lacing from those bugs. You're in misery. And you're naturally sore over the scurvy trick that Jane played on you. But when the poison's worked out of your system you're going to feel better about this jam we're in. I tell you we're going to bust Isadore wide open and if those Montagnais start to hunt us, there'll be plenty of red widows in these parts."

"You may be right, Red," Finlay raised his face with its closed eyes to his friend. "But if we're licked, we'll go down with our colors flying!"

In the morning Wabistan left for the head of the lake to carry on his losing fight against the medicine man. For two days Garry's physical condition kept him in camp, then the swelling began to leave his eyes and he could see. The afternoon of the third day, on his return from the gill-nets with Moise Wabistan, Blaise announced: "Cano' movin' up de shore!"

Red got his glasses from the tent. "Well, I'll be whip-sawed if that double-crossing Jane hasn't had the gall to send that boy hunting for us, again!" snorted Malone.

"Sure it's the one who brought that message?" asked Finlay, alive to the sudden tightening of his throat, the jump of his pulse. He was again deep in the spell of those last moments with Lise Demarais.

"Absolutely, and he's scared into a cold sweat," said Red, his binoculars at his eyes. "Got to hand it to that kid! He's game to show up here after what happened."

A hundred yards from shore the canoe man held his paddle with men start out on the Nottaway, and visit Isadore in his magnificent home. Finlay meets Lise, Isadore's stepdaughter, in response to an appeal to save her. He is ambushed and knocked unconscious. Malone and Blaise find him.

spread hands above his head, the Montagnais gesture of friendliness. Then he drew something white from his shirt and waved it.

"He's shaking like a bush in the wind," commented Malone. "Tell him to come in Moise. He's safe."

The canoe moved in to the beach. "Well, here's where she tries to alibi herself out of it." His freckled face sour with disgust Red handed Finlay a skin wrapper containing a letter. "What a nerve that little decoy duck packs in that swell shape of hers! She's as tough as raw-hide but who'd guess it with that face!"

Finlay ignored his friend's characterization of Lise Demarais. He began to read:

"After what has happened you have good reason never to trust me again. The very thought drives me frantic. But I had to write you. I swear I did not know they had followed me. If I had, could I have acted that way before those breeds? Could I have lost my head—done what I did? Do you think me as cheap as that? But I'm not sorry. I'm terribly glad. Believe it or not, I was honest. I was carried far out to sea. I've never met a man like you, Garry Finlay!"

"That night Labelle rushed in and called Jules from the table. When he returned, I knew by his face something awful had happened. 'You met Finlay this afternoon, damn you!' he roared. 'Now three men are dead and another hurt! But this fake surveyor paid for it tonight!' Then he struck me in the face!"

"It was all so sudden—so ghastly. He wouldn't tell us what had happened. I didn't know whether you were alive or dead. He accused me of trying to betray him. When I asked him what there was to betray he started towards me and I ran to my room to get my pistol. He'll never strike me again—never!"

"Oh, I beg you to believe me! I knew nothing—nothing about those men! They saw my canoe leave for the swimming beach and followed. They never had done it before. I was sick not knowing what I had done to you. And I was so terribly alone—so helpless! I didn't dare trust Corinne. She talks too much. Finally I found Louis Mikisis, my messenger, and he listened outside Tete-Blanche's cabin and learned that you had been left to die in a swamp. If I had known where you were, Garry Finlay, I would have found you, that night. But I could only suffer and pray."

"In the morning I saw Tete-Blanche and Tetu returning in a canoe to the post. Jules met them on the shore and acted like a wild man. Later Louis told me that you had escaped. I went to my room and cried. You were alive—alive and free!"

"Last night Jules was in the trade-room with Tete-Blanche, Tetu and Labelle. I listened at the open window. They are going to set a guard at the outlet of the lake, the Quiet Water. They'll try to ambush you."

"Your lives depend on your leaving at once!"

"I implore you, Garry Finlay, trust me and send an answer by Louis. If you wish to reach me, later, leave a note under the big rock on the bathing beach. Louis will get it. Please, oh, please believe that I was honest that day, that I—that you're my only hope."

"Lise."

Finlay's brown hands were unsteady as he finished the letter. As wind driven surf pounds a beach, wave on wave of emotion had beaten through him as he read. He read the letter again while the waiting Malone and Blaise scowled.

Finlay handed the letter to the disturbed Malone. "We were wrong, Red. This letter is honest and explains the whole thing. It couldn't have been faked and, besides, they know it wouldn't work the second time. There's news here that'll interest you. When you read it, you'll agree that Isadore couldn't have had a hand in this. It's too damned straight!"

Malone slowly wagged his head as he took the letter. "What the women will do to a good man!" he sighed. But, gradually, as he read, the sneer on his incredulous face smoothed out.

"Well, I'll be shot at sunrise if I don't think the kid is on the level!" exploded Malone, returning the letter to Garry. "I've handed her some pretty raw compliments, Garry, but I'm going to take them all back right here and now. Isadore'd never play it this way if he was behind this. That girl can sure write a letter, and boy! is she weak on Sergeant Garrett Finlay? Some medicine man, chief!"

The blood drifted up over Finlay's brown neck and cheeks as he met Malone's grin. "Red, we're going to take care of her!" he said quietly.

Malone thrust out a big-wristed hand and gripped Garry's. "We are, chief, and so is Blaise! Aren't you, Blaise, you old son of a—"

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Dean of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

Lesson for September 28

THE FULFILLMENT OF HISTORY: THE NEW JERUSALEM

LESSON TEXT—Revelation 21:1-7, 10-12, 22:3-5

GOLDEN TEXT—He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son.—Revelation 21:7.

A happy ending may not suit the fancy of modern writers of fiction, but it does suit God. He "who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will" (Eph. 1:11) will see to it that redeemed man shall "be to the praise of his glory" (Eph. 1:12). The eternal, omnipotent God will bring the history of His dealings with mankind to a glorious ending. The last book of the Bible comes to its last pages where, after dealing with the final struggle of man with his enemy Satan (which has gone on since the entrance of sin into the world in the Garden of Eden), we find the glorious, God-given revelation of the "divine, final restoration of the universe, a picture of the home where we who love the Lord Jesus will forever dwell."

I. "The Tabernacle of God Is with Men" (vv. 1-7).

Our God is always with His people, but there is a promise of the time when He shall "pitch His tent" (for thus we might translate the word "tabernacle") in their very midst and "be with them" in full and unhindered fellowship. This He once did for a time when "the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us" (John 1:14), or literally "tabernacled among us." In the day of which our lesson speaks He will come to live permanently with His people.

The blessings of His divine presence are beautifully described in verses 4 to 6. There will be no more tears, because every occasion for them is gone. There will be no death, pain or sorrow, for the one who sits upon the throne will have made everything new.

Christianity does not evade the question of sorrow and suffering, but it does point to a glorious day when they will be done forever. What a precious promise!

II. "The Holy City . . . Having the Glory of God" (vv. 10-12).

The description of the holy city is differently interpreted, but perhaps the best one is that it will be in the form of a pyramid on a square base 1,500 miles in width and length (12,000 furlongs—v. 16), rising in terraces, and 1,500 miles high at the top.

The description of the city is glorious beyond words (read 21:1 through 22:7), but the crowning fact of all is that it has "the glory of God." His presence means more than all the glories of precious stones and of "pure gold, like unto clear glass." He is more than His gifts, and His presence is more glorious than all His mighty works.

III. God the Almighty and the Lamb Are the Temple (vv. 22).

As long as we live under the present conditions of life, we cannot do without a place to meet to worship God and to receive spiritual help and strength—a temple. But when the redeemed are gathered in the Holy City they will have no need for a temple. The place of meeting with God "which now has to be delimited from the world, and set apart for God—yes, and held with determination and force of will against invading hosts—has there expanded to cover the whole area of human experience and activity. God's presence has no longer to be sought; it is known; it is felt, universal and all-pervading as the light of day" (C. Anderson Scott).

IV. No Need of the Sun—the Glory of God Did Light It (vv. 23, 24).

The great need of man in this world is light. He rejoices in the sun as it sheds its life-giving rays upon the earth. He does his work and finds his healthful recreation in the day. When darkness comes, he must have illumination, that he may read, study, work, or fellowship with others. From the flickering pine knot man went on to the candle, to the lamp; and now in most places he floods his city and its homes with the light of electricity. But even so there is too much darkness in the world, and the men who love darkness rather than light (see John 3:19) are able to practice their evil deeds.

In the New Jerusalem all will be light, for the One who is light (I John 1:5) and the source of all light, permits His glory to shine forth and "lighten it." Jesus, the Lamb, who is the light of the world (John 8:12), is the never failing lamp of the city.

In such light not only the nations of the earth, but their kings as well, will want to walk, doing honor with all their glory to the One who is all-glorious. The verses which follow our lesson tell us that the gates of the city shall never be closed, but only that which is good and honorable shall enter in. Nothing sinful, vile, or false shall come within its blessed portals.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nationwide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

TINLEY PARK SCHOOL NEWS

Teacher reports to parents of the first and second grade pupils has long been a matter of concern to teachers. During the first two years of a child's school life many adjustments must be made by the child. Many times the wrong kind of a start will determine the kind of work a child will do throughout his school life. It is a commonly accepted fact that with the present system of reports the burden is placed upon the child. The uppermost thought in the minds of these young people is the getting of grades. This thought along with the mental and physical adjustments the child is making place a great strain upon these young minds.

The role of the teacher is not one of giving grades, but rather one of helping the child learn and develop both mentally and physically. With this in mind the teachers of the two lower grades are making appointments with the parents. The resulting conference will be a report by the teacher of the child's progress in school work and in social adjustment to the group. Here the emphasis is not placed on the matter of grades but rather on the much broader development of the child. Parents will be helpful in these conferences through the suggestions they can give the teacher which will help that teacher to better understand the individual child and thus do a better job of helping the child grow.

Under the present plan the parents will be asked to come to the school three times during the school year for these conferences. Requests for conferences will be sent to the parents by the teacher. If the time suggested by the teacher is not convenient to the parents a convenient time may be set by the parent. Should the parent desire extra conferences with the teacher, such appointments may be made in the school office.

Through this method it is hoped that the parent will receive a more satisfactory report on the progress of the child and the teacher will have a better understanding of that child and his needs.

The report to parents of the other grades remains the same as it has been in the past. However the teachers are also asking parents to come in to discuss the general growth of each child so that they might have a better understanding of the children in their charge and thus may help these children even more.

Three Expert Trouble-shooters

Telephones "out-of-order" are few and far between today—due to constant improvements in equipment and methods. But when something does go wrong, here's what happens:

1. "Repair Service" takes your trouble report promptly, finds your service card while you talk and takes down all the facts you can give her...

2. The Test Deskman examines service card for the record of your telephone — then makes a number of tests to decide the nature and location of the trouble...

3. The Repairman usually knows where to look before he arrives. He fixes the line, then reports back to Testman who makes careful tests to be sure service is ok.

John Clay Co. Report on Livestock

The Jewish New Year's last Monday and Tuesday, was reflected in the steer trade early this week, particularly where beeves above 1200 lbs. were concerned. Then, too, the East has been wrestling with liberal supplies of beef and in no mood to further crowd sagging hangrails. Light offerings, both steers and heifers, sold on the strong side.

Hogs continue to top the $12 mark so far as choice offerings are concerned. Until the supply of spring farrowed shoats begin to move in increased numbers the trade appears to be in good technical position. Fat lambs seem to have settled down after the recent $1 break.

The range cattle movement is now in full swing. The assortment is wide and prospective purchasers are able to select about any class they have in mind. The liberal supply on hand this week brought about a 25c reduction in quotations. Feeder lambs have been scarce, but with Montanas ready to move an increase in thin offerings is expected locally.

Storage stocks of meat and lard decreased in the past month, the former dropping 21 per cent and the latter 17 per cent. Holdings, however, are 28 and four per cent in excess of a year ago, lard being of record September volume. Reserves of beef and pork are greatest for this period since 1934 and substantially larger than the September five-year average.

Automatic Detachable Gas House-Heater

Fits easily into door of warm air furnace or hot water boiler
... does not interfere with regular Winter furnace operation.

Hundreds now in use!

Now—enjoy automatic heat when it counts the most and costs the least! Counts the most—because Fall days with changeable weather take lots of furnace fussing if you don't have automatic heat. Even if you do watch the weather closely and get out the shovel every time the mercury drops, chances are your house is too cold in the morning and too hot in the afternoon. That's the beauty of this automatic gas house-heater—it takes the work off your hands, and does a perfect job.

And don't forget about costs—Fall and Spring are the seasons when automatic heat costs the least! It takes a lot of extra fuel to build a new furnace fire every few days. The automatic gas house-heater saves money, because it doesn't waste fuel. And besides that ... you get a special low house heating gas rate!

Get the complete facts on this fine new work-saver now—before those costly hard-to-heat Autumn days are here. Write, phone or come in to your Public Service office.

Attach it in 30 seconds. Weighs less than 14 pounds. No pipes or bolts to bother with—you don't even need a wrench.

Let it do all the work. Set the thermostat at the house temperature you like best—then forget it.

BIRD ROOFS
Established 1795

Roofing is very essential, economical; it saves on fuel when done by such experts as are employed by Fisher & Willms of Brookfield. Their slogan is: "Results, Not Excuses."

Free of charge they will make a careful inspection of your roof, report loose flashings, separated laps, accidental breaks, weakened spots where water has always stood and give you an estimate on needed repairs if you wish it. If your roof needs no repairs nor protection, you are under no obligation to them and you have the satisfaction of knowing there will be no roof trouble for some time.

Many farmers today have suffered the loss of their barns and homes which could have been saved through a fire-safe roof. Their excellent roofing can be laid over the old shingles which will keep your house or barn warm in winter and cool in summer. In this way the added beauty serves many purposes and at a very low cost. Once the new roof is on, your roofing troubles are all over.

We are pleased in this 1941 Review to refer all our readers to them and to compliment Fisher & Willms, Roofing and Building Contractors.

Fight For Lead at Raceway Park

Bob Muhlke of Kenilworth, winner of the 100 lap race last week, will clash with Tony Bettenhausen, Myron Fohr, Ted Duncan and Mike O'Halloran for the lead in the point standing for the season title in the midget auto races Saturday night at Raceway Park, 129th and Ashland.

Muhlke scored his victory in the century driving the fast No. 2 Muntz Nichols Offenhausner with which Duncan has been cleaning up this season on the midget circuits. He will pilot his own No. 3 Offy next Saturday evening, while Duncan will return to competition at the wheel of the No. 2. Fohr, who was runner up in the century, went ahead of Duncan for second place in the title point standing. O'Halloran, who finished third, still occupies fourth with Muhlke now a close fifth.

However, Bettenhausen retains the lead in the point ratings. He sat next to Fohr, who was at the pole, at the start of the 100 lap race, took the lead in the second turn of the first lap and held it for ten laps, when Jimmy Caris, who was coming fast passed Tony only to relinquish the lead to the Tinley Park ace in the 20th. Tony went out with a flat tire in the 40th and Caris moved up into first place, holding it until the 69th when he too went out with a flat tire.

Muhlke, who was fourth in the race for half the distance, passed Fohr in third just before Bettenhausen went out and replaced Caris in the lead when Jimmy took to the pits. In the meantime Tony had made a quick tire change and returned to the fray but came to grief riding high on the turns when he skidded through the guard rails in the east curve. He emerged with only minor injuries.

Others listed to compete in the eight-event card Saturday night include Pete Romcevic, Emil Andres, Harry Lewis, Frank Buraney, Johnny Kieweg, Gus Klingbiel, Al Cummings, Shorty Sorenson, Al Sprang, Dan Kladis, Eddie Kracek and Frank Perrone. Twelve will qualify in four reverse order eliminations at 10 laps each for the 30 lap main event. There will be three other events with the time trials to get underway at 7:30.

1940 TAX COLLECTIONS

With all of the 1940 tax collections tabulated, County Treasurer John Toman, today reports collections of $172,771,233.10 as against $147,159,400.03 for the same period last year, an increase of $25,611,833.07. Toman says not in the history of the treasurer's office have these collection figures ever been reached before.

Toman points out that real estate collections, especially were high—$130,889,925.17 which represents more than 86 percent of the total taxes collected. This is almost twice as much as last year.

The treasurer declares that when it is considered that many loop properties in delinquency never pay up because the incomes do not meet the taxes, he feels that this is a big achievement in collecting taxes.

Railroads have come through with a big increase in their taxes. They have paid over $10,000,000 this year or 99.84 of their total bills.

Personal property collections, though greater than last year, lagged some 40 percent remaining uncollected.

The House That Frank Built

The following is an article from Boake Carter's Daily Newspaper Column, September 11.

New York. The attack on the Greer is a quite natural sequence in the government's foreign policy.

Having taken over the job of establishing an outpost on Iceland—officially classified as "protection" at the Icelandic government's requests, which was, in its turn, an outcome of pressure from London—the United States must service that base of operations.

In the servicing thereof, incidents such as that which befell the Greer are bound to occur.

If another attack should turn out less fortunately for the United States in other words, if torpedoes do not miss the next time—it may well mean the arrival of the shooting phase of our war effort.

It will be officially stated, of course, that we began shooting because we were the victims of unjustified attack.

A paraphrase of the nursery rhyme about the house that Jack built might provide a more factual chronology:

This is the war, which forced Mr. Churchill to ask for supplies from Mr. Roosevelt, which Hitler sunk, which made Mr. Churchill ask Mr. Roosevelt for naval assistance, which

Mr. Roosevelt called patrols, which obliged Mr. Churchill to say "Not enough", which provoked the President to suggest to Churchill to suggest to Iceland that American troops protect the island from Nazi attack, which produced the invitation from the Iceland Premier to President Roosevelt to send some troops, to protect the island, to serve as a base, to patrol the Atlantic and report to the British the Nazis they saw which required the dispatch of American warships to service the outpost in Iceland's harbors, which caused the Greer to carry mail which caused the torpedo, which missed the Greer but gave a boost to the foreign policy Roosevelt built.

The incident seems to confirm the oft-stated administration claim that American naval vessels have been ordered not to shoot unless attacked first. When, however, your wireless is busy reporting that you have seen the vessels of a belligerent nation, it is obvious that you are inviting attack from the belligerent whose movements you are reporting to his opponent.

The results in the long run, therefore, are about the same. But for the sake of the record, you can always say you were attacked first and, therefore, whatever you did thereafter was in the nature of defense and not offense.

"LIFE BEGINS FOR ANDY HARDY"

A-haunting they do go on a ghost hook-up in "Hold That Ghost" upholding the superlative performances of Bud Abbott, Lou Costello, The Andrews Sisters and Ted Lewis with his entertainers, which will be featured at the Roxy Theatre, at Lockport, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Abbott and Costello are operators of a gas station and by some accidental twist of circumstances they become involved with the doing of a gangster, also, just as accidentally become his heirs. One of their major inheritances is a long-abandoned and supposedly haunted tavern, which was the headquarters for rum-runners and gamblers during the prohibition era. The boys become tired of their business, so they secure jobs as relief waiters in a night club where Ted Lewis' orchestra and the Andrews Sisters are entertaining. One of the most eerie sets ever to be devised for a motion picture provides the background for this outstanding fun and laugh fiesta. In the supporting cast are Mischea Auer, Joan Davis, Richard Carlson and Evelyn Ankens.

Youth in action, scandal in Congress and the moderns in love are all congealed in "Adventure in Washington" with Herbert Marshall and Virginia Bruce, which will be featured at the Roxy Theatre, Wednesday and Thursday. The second feature will be "Bullets for O'Hara" a story of the secret service versus a public enemy, with Joan Perry and Roger Pryor.

Friday and Saturday, The Roxy Theatre will present a superb twin billing of "Wide Open Town" with William "Hop-along" Boyd, Russell Hayden and Andy Clyde. The second feature will be "San Antonio Rose" with Jane Frazee, Robert Paige and Lon Chaney, Jr.

WAFFLES AT NIGHT—GUESTS' DELIGHT!
(See Recipes Below)

OUT OF THE WAFFLE IRON

Waffles! Um'm! Crisp and browned to suit the taste—a queenly dish, whether you're a homemaker who delights in calling in your friends—a "home body" who caters only to the family—or a lone eater who simply likes nice foods.

It's fun to make 'em . . . it's fun to bake 'em. And waffle baking has made so many homemakers—young and old—waffle-party conscious, that we've included in this week's column games especially suitable for waffle parties.

So why not be a hostess who is different! Invite the "gang" in for a neighborhood "waffle feed." Your new deal in entertaining—whether your guests be club-women, daughter's pals, the high school basketball team, or hubby's cronies—will go down in social history. Mark our words!

Waffle recipes can be divided into two parts—the "ordinary" or "regular" waffle—good enough for anybody; and the waffles with frills and furbelows—gingerbread waffles, chocolate waffles, etc. So we give you some of each.

Waffles.

(Makes 5 waffles)

- 2 cups sifted flour
- 1½ cups milk
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 3 eggs
- 4 to 6 tablespoons melted shortening

Separate the eggs and beat the yolks with the milk. Add the sifted dry ingredients, then the melted shortening, and last, the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into hot waffle iron and bake until iron stops steaming.

Variations for Standard Recipe.

Pineapple Waffles—Reduce milk in plain waffle recipe to 1 cup and add ¾ cup well-drained crushed pineapple.

Date Waffles—Add 1 cup chopped dates mixed with part of flour from recipe.

Ham Waffles—Add 6 tablespoons minced cooked ham to plain waffles.

Huckleberry Waffles—Add 1 cup well-drained, canned or fresh huckleberries mixed with ¼ cup sugar.

Nut Waffles—Add 1 cup finely chopped nuts to standard waffle recipe.

Spiced Waffles—Add 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon cloves and ½ teaspoon nutmeg to batter for plain waffles. Nuts may be added to this.

Corn Waffles—Add 1 cup well-drained, canned whole-kernel corn to standard recipe.

Yeast Waffles.

(Makes 5 waffles)

- 1½ cups milk
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 4 tablespoons melted shortening
- 1 yeast cake
- ¾ cup warm water
- 2 cups flour
- 2 eggs

Dissolve yeast in warm water. Add salt and melted fat, then milk and flour. Stir until smooth. Let

LYNN SAYS:

Care of the Waffle Iron. Most modern electric waffle irons should not be greased, but extra richness must be put into the waffle batter. This should be poured on the pre-heated iron from a pitcher or with a large spoon.

With continued use, the cooking surface is apt to become brown, and it is a mistake to remove this unless it becomes burned or too thick. During the occasional scorings, great care must be taken not to get water into the connection plug or heating element. A damp cloth or a soft brush should be used to free the iron from excess batter or crumbs.

stand over night, or 1½ hours. When ready to use, beat egg yolks, add to mixture and then add beaten whites. Bake 4 minutes on a very hot iron.

Fruit Sauce for Waffles.

- ½ cup butter
- 2 cups powdered sugar
- 1 cup crushed berries
- 1 egg white
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream butter, add powdered sugar and when well creamed, stir in white of egg and vanilla. Mix thoroughly and add berries. Chill. Makes a delicious topping for waffles when served for supper, dessert, or even late-at-night as a "snack."

Gingerbread Waffles.

(Makes 6 waffles)

- 1½ cups pastry flour
- ¼ cup sugar
- ½ cup molasses
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup sour milk
- 1 teaspoon ginger
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon soda
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 6 tablespoons melted shortening

Beat eggs until light. Add sugar, molasses and sour milk. Sift dry ingredients together and add. Beat until smooth. Add shortening and bake 3 or 4 minutes. Serve with ice cream.

Chocolate Waffles.

(Makes 4 waffles)

- 1½ cups flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 6 tablespoons sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup milk
- 2 squares chocolate
- 4 tablespoons butter

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Add milk, beaten eggs, fat and chocolate which has been melted over hot water. Preheat iron 8 minutes and bake waffle for three minutes.

Apple Waffles.

(Makes 6 waffles)

- 1½ cups flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 egg
- 2 tablespoons butter
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¾ cup milk
- ½ cup chopped apples
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- Dash of nutmeg

Chop apples, add lemon juice and nutmeg. Let stand for 15 minutes. Sift flour, measure, add dry ingredients and add apples and butter. Heat waffle iron 6 to 8 minutes, pour on batter and bake two to three minutes. Serve with butter and brown syrup.

Here's a good game for your next waffle party. It's called CONSEQUENCES and is played as the old familiar Consequences. Paper and pencil are needed. Each person draws the head of a beast, bird or man, folds the paper over and passes it to the neighbor on his left. Each person then draws a body of beast, bird or man, according to his fancy, and again folds the paper over. The last item to be added is the legs and feet. The paper is to be folded again and passed to the neighbor on the left, then all are opened. The results may be astonishing. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Doctor Tells How Cigarette Saved His Life in War

Dugout Demolished by Shell While He Was Absent Begging a Fag.

MILWAUKEE, WIS. — Smoking cigarettes is more than a habit with Dr. M. E. Gabor. It's a ritual performed with the whole-hearted enjoyment of a person who appreciates the full meaning of life because he once came so close to losing it. Dr. Gabor's joy in living is closely attached to smoking, for he credits his being alive to a cigarette.

This genial, middle-aged doctor, who practices in Shorewood, a Milwaukee suburb, was reared in Austria. During the World war he was a lieutenant in the medical corps of the Austrian imperial army, spending four years on the eastern front. He did what he could to ease the suffering of the wounded and to combat the dread typhus and cholera.

He tells about one afternoon when he could control his craving for cigarettes no longer. He walked half a mile along the shell-torn trenches before finding a friend who gave him one. When he returned to his station his dugout was gone, demolished by a shell. No wonder that cigarette tasted so good.

Lived in the Ukraine.

But war wasn't all hardship. Gabor recalls the happier days spent in Odessa, in the Russian Ukraine, recently the objective of German war planes.

"It's too bad it should be damaged," the doctor said. "The city was so beautiful. It had pretty parks, wonderful beaches and a splendid harbor."

Gabor was sent to Odessa in May, 1918, with 100,000 Austrian soldiers who were summoned to help the White Russians in their fight against the Bolsheviks.

Except for an occasional sniper, Odessa was the only peaceful spot in the embattled Ukraine. The Austrians occupied all of the available barracks, churches and schools. Although the fight against cholera continued, life was comparatively quiet.

"It was like a holiday for us," the doctor recalled. "We had plenty of food. There was bread from the rich wheat fields of the Ukraine. There was no fighting, and it was just like a picnic."

Troops Grow Restless.

But as the summer months passed, the idle Austrian soldiers tired of the foreign environment. They longed for their homeland.

One morning in October, Gabor was awakened by a soldier with the curt order: "Sir, you are my prisoner." Outside fellow soldiers were firing shots into the air and yelling, "Long live the revolution."

It seemed the Austrian soldiers had taken a tip from the Russians and revolted against their officers, who were disarmed and made prisoners. Gabor was locked in a hospital room.

The soldiers relented, however, and offered to call off the mutiny if the officers would lead them back to Austria. The officers were equally eager to return and agreed to the plan.

Gabor returned to his medical studies at Vienna and Prague. He came to Milwaukee in 1920 and has been here ever since except for a sojourn in Vienna for post-graduate work in 1928.

Ammonia Fails to Revive

Her, but a Kiss? Oh, My!

ST. LOUIS. — Deputy Sheriff George Baker witnessed the startling effects of a kiss on a woman who had fainted.

Mrs. Bertha Lyvers, 27 years old, collapsed leaving the courtroom after a hearing on a peace disturbance complaint against her estranged husband, William Lyvers. Baker broke an ammonia capsule under her nose without reviving her. He called an ambulance.

Then, Baker reported, Lyvers, bending over his wife, kissed her. She opened her eyes and slapped him.

Recruiting Marine Almost Enlists Baby in the Navy

PEORIA.—Sgt. Carl E. Hardy has a new one to tell the marines.

New chief marine recruiter here, he was standing the other day in the lobby of a downtown office building. Seeing his trim uniform, a woman entering the lobby, handed him a baby and told him to wait, as she stepped into an elevator. Fifteen minutes later she returned, took the baby, handed Hardy a dime. Almost speechless, he followed, started to protest, only to be asked sharply: "Isn't a dime enough? That's all I ever give any porter."

Tiny Town Really Goes

All Out to Help Win War

WAWOTA, SASK.—This little Saskatchewan community has knocked itself out with its all-out war effort. What likely constitutes a record for all Canada, the district has sent its last available, eligible man to war.

There are no young men able to stand left in Wawota.

The town has a population of 250 and 100 men have left for service. The citizens are doing their bit, too. At a Red Cross carnival they raised $100 an hour for eight straight hours.

In a Minority

A well-known British dramatic agent, Golding Bright, who died recently, handled Shaw's plays among others. But on their first encounter Bright was in the gallery on a Shaw first night. It seems he was the only member of the audience who didn't like the play. Anyway, when Shaw came forward to take the "author" call, Bright greeted him with a full-lunged "Boo!"

"Quite, my dear sir," said Shaw. "But what are you and I among so many?"

STUDIES IN THE GAS SHORTAGE

Out of luck
Is Wilbur Wrenn:
He thought of gas
At 7:10.

Sad indeed
Is Arthur Bott:
'Twas 8 p. m.—
And he forgot!

Shed a tear
For Minnie Wray:
Her friend used all
Her gas by day!

Weep for John
J. Applegate:
The gas man said,
"You're just too late!"

Sympathize
With Nell's friend Joe:
He only said,
"My watch was slow!"

Do not laugh
At Johnson (Will):
He called on her
With just one gill.

The ladies' pride
Is Wallace Wright:
He saves his gas
To drive by night.

Oh lucky egg
Is Luther Mix:
The gas shack clock
Had stopped at six!

And wottaman
Is Barnett ("Puggy"):
He never sold
That HORSE AND BUGGY!

HINTS FOR GAS SAVINGS SLOGANS

Harold Ickes has labored and come forth with a sticker, "I Am Using One Third Less Gas" as a terrific weapon in the drive to save fuel. Well, to this department it seems feeble, trite and ineffective, especially when dealing with human beings who have shaken off their real skin and donned the tough hide of automobilists. Nobody reads the stickers on a windshield, not even the fellow who pastes them on.

If they are to be used, however, why not put a kick in 'em. Something along this line:

"I Am Not a Hog, Even When in an Auto."

"I Wouldn't Cripple Uncle Sam Just for a Few Extra Miles of Touring."

"I Put Patriotism Above Petroleum."

"America First. Picnicking Second."

"I'm Stepping on Hitler, Not on the Accelerator."

"I'd Rather Lay Up My Car Than Lay Up My Future."

Of course in this crisis there is bound to be the fellow who takes the attitude, "I only regret I have but one limousine to give for my country."

Washington announces that boneless beef is making a hit in the navy. It's better than beefless bones.

Defense bonds and stamps are to be sold through dry goods stores, etc. And we know a lady who is going to wait for them to advertise a special sale.

"What this country needs is unity," declared the orator as he proceeded to insult all who disagreed with his personal opinions on the crisis.

The idea of tipping railroad porters ten cents per bundle or bag is now being denounced by both porters and railroads. But nothing they can say would equal the strong language being used by the traveling public. It has never believed there was an iota of fairness in paying 40 cents to have a porter carry a coat, a brief case, a hat box and a book while the fellow with the bass violin and the doghouse got off with 20.

Ima Dodo calls her auto an Ickes-mobile because it has become just a day coach.

Those Churchill photos in conference with Mr. Roosevelt must make a lot of advertisers wish they knew what kind of a cigar he smoked.

Eleven oil companies are to send billions to pump oil to the East. It sounds like a pipe dream.

SUCCESS SECRET

An author's life is often hard Until he gets a book that's barred.

Merrill Chilcote.

The United States Golf association has rescinded its rule prohibiting golfers in regular tournaments from ceasing play during a lightning storm. "They may now stop temporarily if they think they are in danger," it says. Boy, there's what we call consideration, even if it does expose an unnecessarily slow back-swing.
